ported, on Saturday, against the enactment of a General Banking law in that State. The minority of the commit-tee reported in its favor. Both reports were ordered to be printed, and will probably come up for action in a few days. There are petitions before the Legislature of Conmeeticut for seventeen new banks, two to be located in New Haven, and one in each of the following places, viz : -Hartford, New Britain, New London, Mystic (Groton.) Stonington, Danielsonville (Killingly.) Madison, Guliford, Beymour, Bridgeport, Bethel (Danbury.) Middletown, Westport, Woodbury, and Clinton. The following banks in Connecticut have petitioned for an increase of capital viz: -The Exchange Bank of Hartford, the Deep River Bank, the Farmers' Bank of Bridgeport, the Danbury Bank, the Middlesex County Bank, and the Waterbury

The Albany and Susquehanna Railroad, for the con-struction of which a company, with an intelligent and energetic board of directors, has recently been organized, is attracting so much both of local and general attention, that a few facts, illustrative of its character and importance, cannot fail to interest all who regard the progress of internal improvements as one of the best evidences, as well as surest sources, of national prosperity. A mere the country, show its importance. With one end at tide-water and the capital of the State, and the other at Binghamton, on the line of the New York and Eric Railroad, its course is through the valleys of the Normans-kill, Schoharie, Cobleskill and Schenevas creeks, and of the Susquehanna river, connecting at the State line, near Great Bend, with the Leggett's Gap Railroad and the rich will be about one hundred and forty miles; its width of track the same as those of the Leggett's Gap and the New York and Eric railroads; its grades favorable; its route very direct, and, for its length, unusually free from bridges, culverts, deep cuts and heavy embankments. It follows that it can be built cheaply, and travelled with more than ordinary safety and rapidity. Nor are its facilities and advantages as a business road at all inferior to those of any other railroad in our State, as will be evident by a mere glance at some of those more obvious and promiment. For tributaries and feeders it has on the west the same extent of country as the New York and Erie, and vantage over either—that as much easting or westing can be made over it as can, in the same length of time, be made over either of the others, while it serves as a link of connection to both-an advantage which no other road, intermediate Lake Erie and the Hudson, does or can enjoy ; and one of no little importance, as the following considerations will show :—It gives a choice of routes to the traveller, between New England and the West; it ena-bles produce, seeking a market at tide-water, to find it, without delay or enhanced expense, at either Albany, Boston or New York, as may be most advantageous ; it mation is the city of New York, to reach that point from Binghamton by a pleasanter and safer route, and in less time, than by the New York and Eric Railroad. That this is no exaggeration is evident; for the directness and easy grades of the Albany and Susquehanna road will permit passenger trains easily and safely to pass over its catire length in four hours; and thus, in connection with New York in eight and a half hours from Binghamton It were easy to point out many other advantages for through business, which this road will possess, and which must at least place it on a par, both as to passengers and freight, with either of its great rivals But if its through business, or that coming from beyoud its termini, must be great, its local business, or that reaching it along its route, can hardly be less, and may be much, more important. It will pass through the heart of than that embraced in the two sovereign States of Rhode Island and Delaware, and half as great as the magnificent and cottly railroads. And this territory is a rich and productive agricultural and manufacturing section of our State: embracing more than fifty towns, many flourishing villages, a population of about 200,000, and affording a vast amount of water power. All experience teaches that a railroad permeating such an extent of such a country cannot fail to do a heavy amount of of such a country cannot fail to do a heavy amount of local business. But there is, as yet unnoted, one item in its local business, perhaps more important than all others, in which it will be without a rival, and which "makes assurance doubly sure" that it will stand, both as to business and profits, equal to, if not far ahead of, any other railroad in our State. That item is the coatrade. Its connection with the Leggett's Gap road will enable it to defy competition in supplying the important article of anthracite coal, not only to the region through which it runs, but to Albany and Troy, with their steam navigation, immense iron foundries and other manu-facturing establishments, and to large portions of Vermont and Massachusetts. This road is intensely in-teresting and important, in another point of view. It is the finishing link in that splendid chain of railroads that adorn and enoble the Empire State, and which, in connection with her commercial emporium, her noble Hudson, her inland seas and her magnificent canals, have already placed and must forever keep her, in all the material elements of greatness and prosperity, far ahead of her sisters—"the bright particular star" in such a galaxy of glorious republics as, hitherto, this
